

Linda

I was touched and saved in my thirties! Somehow there were more important things in my life, or so I thought. I went to church on Sunday, but my prayer life, reading of the word, and witnessing were not abundant in my life at that time. But, I found out within the last 6-8 years, that He is not finished with me yet.

When we learned of our grandson's illness with MD, I almost fell apart! It was completely consuming me. But, I kept hearing this voice, saying to me "I WILL get you through this". So, when I am at rock bottom, which happens frequently, I rely on Him to get me through. He has sustained me and I know I can face this difficulty, probably not with Grace, but with the power that only He can give me.

I can honestly say that I rely on Him everyday of my life, beginning with prayer in the early morning and throughout the day. I do praise God for not turning his back on me and I praise him for the continued work he is doing in my life.

I know this obstacle was placed in our life for a reason. Do I wonder "why me?" Of course I do, but I know that Jesus suffered much more than I am suffering, so even in my darkest hour, I have to continue to say "why not me?"

Please continue to pray for our precious grandson when you think of us. Jesus just might do a huge miracle in Remington's life and ours.
